

The Top 4 Amazon Shareholders

By CRAIG ANTHONY | Updated Feb 4, 2020

Amazon (AMZN) became the second company after Apple (AAPL) to cross the $1 trillion market capitalization when its stock moved beyond $2,000 per share in Sept. 2018. The company, which was founded in July 1994 by Jeffrey Bezos as an online bookstore, is now the largest online retailer in the world. As the company evolved, it began selling DVDs, CDs, streaming music, and video services. It then began offering a wide variety of products such as cloud storage, video games, software and electronics, clothing, toys, and food.

In fact, there are few things you can't get on Amazon today, and its shareholders have been rewarded handsomely as the retailer has experienced exponential growth over the years. In that respect, Jeff Bezos, McKenzie Bezos, Andrew R. Jassy, and Jeffery Wilke are the largest individual stakeholders.

Jeff Bezos

It is not a surprise that Amazon's chief executive officer \(CEO\) and founder, Jeff Bezos is the company's biggest shareholder. Bezos was born in 1964 in Albuquerque, N.M. He studied computer science and electrical engineering at Princeton University. After graduating, Bezos worked for the Wall Street firm D.E. Shaw, becoming the youngest senior vice president in its history.
